Mrs. Frost is the widow of Horace H. Frost, for years a resident of Norway. She was dangerously ill the past winter, but has so far recovered as to walk to a neighbor's on her birthday.

She is very pleasantly situated in a cozy home of her own where she is cared for by her eldest daughter, Mrs. Esther M. Pearson, and was visited by her second daughter, Mrs. Luena Englestone of Nevada. Her youngest daughter, Addie lives in Michigan.

One of the family sends the Advertiser here and it is eagerly read like a letter from home.

This was in the form of a variety shower and upon the arrival of the bride to be, was showered with confetti, which gave her a complete surprise as she assumed it to be the regular meeting of the Minerva club of which she was a member.

Miss Thibodeau was presented with a basket which contained a variety of small aluminum articles with an original rhyme attached to each article, the reading of which caused a lot of merriment. When the bottom of the basket was reached, instructions were found directing her to other places in the house, where she would find, concealed, various articles. On investigating the different places, some pretty and useful gifts were revealed, including silver, china, linen and other articles.

The dining room was prettily decorated in the color scheme was in pink and white. In the center of the table was a handsome bouquet of pink and white carnations, which was a gift from Mr. Rowe. The sandwiches were tied with dainty pink and white ribbon. White ice cream was served with angel cake with pink frosting.

A number of the members of the club have married within a few years, and for the benefit of the bride to be, they presented her with a long list of "things to do and not to do," so that she may be prepared and make no mistakes in managing her new home.

The wedding cake was of the attractive features. It was a fine oval cake, frosted in white with the dates 1866-1916 in gold. The cake was made by their granddaughter, Hazel Everett.

During the afternoon about 125 relatives and friends called at their home. Also were served the guests and music and solos formed part of the entertainment. Four poems written by friends and relatives were read, one of which follows:

Fifty years is a long time to go through this life together. Yet, sometimes, it seems to us very short. Through storms and through sunny weather. In fifty years you have far-off lands. Where strange birds sing and palm trees grow. But you, who have lived in old Norway. Nearly all of your wedded years. Care not for those far-off strange homes. Nor strange songs the wanderer hears. Far sweeter to you are the waters here. Near which you have made your home; The river so crooked, the lake so fair. Not far have you come to us through the years.

Not has been called away. O, happy, three happy, the parents who, Grandchildren many and great ones too, Are here today, you to greet; They are more to you than the wealth of kings. Or of the autocrat, laid at your feet. And all the rest of us present here, Relative, neighbor, or friend, All in wishing you many years, Of happiness without end. D. Giles April 4, 1916.

At this gathering there were five generations present: Mr. Everett's only brother, Elbridge Everett of Harrison was present; his sister, Mrs. C. F. Sprague of Claremont, N. H., was unable to be present.

NEW PASTOR.

Rev. William A. Smith, recently called from a pastorate of eight years in Suffield, Conn., will assume his duties as pastor of the Hebron Baptist church, Sunday morning, April 2. His first audience is likely to be small, owing to the fact that the spring term of the academy does not begin until April 5. The following Sunday, however, the church will be filled with townspeople and students eager to greet the new pastor.

His father was Rev. S. K. Smith, D. D., for 42 years the beloved pastor of the Hebron Baptist church. Graduating from the public schools of the Elm city, Mr. Smith fitted for college at Colburn Classical Institute, matriculating at Colby in the fall of 1887. After completing his course at Colby in 1891, he taught for a year as private tutor, and then was in the faculty of Stetson university, DeLand, Fla., as professor of history and logic.

While in the South Mr. Smith decided to prepare for the ministry. With that purpose in view he entered Newton Theological Institute, graduating with the B. D. degree in 1896. After completing his course at Newton, Mr. Smith spent a year in Europe, studying at the German University of Halle and traveling in Germany, Switzerland, Italy and Austria.

Upon returning to America, Mr. Smith did not immediately enter the ministry, but taught Greek and geometry at Waterville high school for five years. In 1905 he was called to be the first pastor of the newly organized Central Square Baptist church in Portland. During his pastorate the present house of worship used by the society was built. For five years he served the Central Square parish as their efficient and popular leader, resigning in 1908 to accept a call to Suffield, Conn. There he remained until his recent acceptance of the call to Hebron.

Mr. Smith was ordained to the Baptist ministry at Waterville, in July, 1907, the renowned Rev. Dr. G. D. B. Pepper preaching the ordination sermon. In 1903 he married Miss Lois E. Exie of Waterville, a graduate of Colby in that year. They have two sons, aged 9 and 5 years.

During his 12 years of service in the ministry, it will be noted that he has held but two pastorates, both highly successful.

GENERAL NEAL DOW.

Preface.—When I received the request to prepare a paper relating to Gen. Neal Dow, I did not understand that it was to be a history of his military life, nor did I know it until I saw a notice to that effect in the Allie O'Connell Column last Monday. At that time I had this paper nearly done.

Prepared by request of James Bryant Post and read in that Post by L. C. Bisbee of Minneapolis, late Captain of the 10th Maine Volunteers. The temperance reform took place in Portland, Maine, soon after the close of the war of 1812. The first men to act were two distinguished clergymen of Portland—the Rev. Edward Payson, D. D., and Rev. Ichabod Nichols, D. D. Sixty-seven other persons were willing to associate themselves in the effort they inaugurated. Hence the society they formed was locally known as the "Sixty-Niners."

The step taken in that Quaker Meeting House at the time was a revolution on the long established habits and customs of that time, and met with all kinds of difficulties, insult and derision. The boys of the town, when they could procure a brush and paint, painted all available places with the figures "Sixty-Niners." The "Sixty-Niners" were in favor of total abstinence. This was going too fast and too far for the masses of the people. A meeting was called at a famous tavern to take into consideration what could be done to stay the tide of temperance—that of the fanatical "Sixty-Niners," as well as the hard drinkers. This meeting was in the nature of a dinner or supper, and leading citizens who, while in favor of temperance, opposed total abstinence, took part. At this supper liquors were on the table, and it was during the drinking of those good citizens considered what could be done to correct the intemperate habits of the masses.

General Dow says that with his sisters, he was at parties given by the young people of their acquaintance. At these parties, among other refreshments, wine was always served, and was used as any other drink would be. One season, when it became their turn to entertain, he said "our attention having been called to the subject of temperance, my sisters and I discussed the propriety of the serving wine. We were unanimous in thinking that we ought not to offer it, but my older sister suggested that our motives might be misunderstood and that the omission might do more harm than good."

He was inclined to that view, but my younger sister insisted that if we were to do what we thought was right. The wine was left out. Our party was a great success, the absence of wine being made up in other ways. This example after a while, became the rule at all such parties in Portland.

In 1841 the Washingtonian temperance movement was originated by a few drinking men in Baltimore. They pledged themselves to total abstinence from the use of all intoxicating liquors. This society spread through all sections and was very popular for a time. It was the means put forward to reform drinking men. The writer has a plain recollection of attending some of these meetings, probably about 1844 or '45. There lived in the neighborhood one drinking man who signed the pledge and kept it. I recollect that he started to build a house for himself one fall—had a raising—all became drunk and the frame was left all winter partly completed. During the ensuing winter he signed the pledge and later completed his house and became a respected and industrious citizen.

I recall a verse of one of the songs sung in those meetings: Rum, rum, thou hast bereft me of home, Friends, pleasures so sweet, Now, now, forever I have left thee, Thou and I never shall meet.
No, no, then and I never shall meet.
At the time referred to I was about twelve years old.

The next temperance organization that came to the front was the Cold Water Army, taking in the boys and girls up to 18 years of age. Every village in Maine had its army. I became a member. The army that I belonged to, of Canton, was invited to join the Dixfield Army, ten miles distant, on July 4th, in a picnic. We went on a big wagon hauled by a four-horse team. I recollect that it was very hot, also that it was the first time that I took a girl to any place. The same girl became my wife, later. The picnic took place in a grove near the village. We had temperance songs and addresses. Dr. Shattuck of the Waterford Water Cure Sanitarium, and Hannibal Hamlin were the speakers.

Next in order came the Society of Temperance Watchmen, which I joined as soon as I was eligible by age—18 years. Then came the Sons of Temperance, of which society I became a member at 21 years of age, and attended all the meetings until about the time of the breaking out of the war. I was the oldest of four brothers; three of us were later in the army. We were all total abstinence men. Sitting at the table one day with the hired man, one of us proposed that we drink nothing but cold water. So we agreed and for five years I drank nothing but coffee. I write this to show you what influence the temperance movement had on myself and family.

In the course of several years, with all this work, riding and boxing, in which favor of prohibition among the masses of the people was established, and in 1849 a prohibition law was passed, but was vetoed by Governor Dana. The same bill was passed by the Legislature the following session and received the Governor's sanction. Neal Dow drew the bill and at the time it became a law, he was mayor of Portland, and in effect, to the liquor dealers of Portland, he said, "Now, boys, the City of Portland has opened under a new management (we see this on signs on our saloons occasionally). The law will be enforced, but we will give you a reasonable time to dispose of your stocks and send them out of the State." The city was very soon free from liquor.

Neal Dow was a man of small size, and there was nothing about his features that would indicate the difficulties that marked him as one of the foremost men in his day in the cause which he espoused. His hair was brown, eyes blue, his lips thin and firmly closed when not speaking—on the whole, a pleasing countenance. As a speaker, not emotional, but clear, concise and to the point. A very convincing speaker.

Neal Dow, as a youth, got his education in the common schools and academies and by diligent reading. He says he entered his father's tannery at the age of 16 to make himself generally useful, but kept up his reading and practice in debating societies.

Gen. Dow when young learned sword exercises, riding and boxing, in which latter he became very proficient. I judge these reformers were subjected to all kinds of insults and annoyance, and sometimes to personal violence. One incident he recites is that one of the active workers living near Portland was taken from his bed and dipped in a long watering trough. He says one day he was walking down the street, he heard someone behind him that turned just in time to receive a blow that felled him, but he got up and the fellow, a sailor, tried to hit him again several times, but did not succeed, then turned and ran. Mr. Dow was not willing to let it go that way, followed and overtook him, and the fellow surrendered, and as he held him down, a neighbor saw in the sailor's clothing what appeared to be the handle of a knife, pulled it out and it was a cowhide. As he suspected, he found that the sailor had been hired to cowhide him by some rumblers. He presented them, but on account of disagreement of two juries failed to convict them, but he says it cost the rumblers three hundred dollars in costs and the sailor's pay.

Gen. Dow says that he sometimes walked in the middle of the street to avoid assaults. I infer that he was armed sometimes, for he says he entered his house one evening, removed his outer coat and threw it over the stair rail, forgetting to remove the brace of pistols in the pockets. One of them was discharged—shattered the globe on the hall lamp and the ball grazed the face of his daughter, who was on her way upstairs. He says that was the last time he carried arms.

Now you will notice that Mr. Dow does not say anything about being the hero of the town. He does say that he was holding him down. It is not to be presumed that the sailor laid down voluntarily and allowed Dow to sit on him. That is where the Quaker comes in.

In another place he says assaults were frequent, but he says the same person never assaulted him the second time. The ladies used to take part in the temperance work and sometimes were insulted. Mrs. Dow was one of those ladies. She visited a liquor seller for some purpose and was subjected to insulting language. She informed Mr. Dow and he had a interview with the man and had no further trouble with him.

He relates this incident: At a meeting, a firm consisting of three brothers, merchant rumblers, were present, with their wives. After promising at their homes that night, each one of the brothers and their wives had a consultation over the liquor question. Each couple decided that the firm must discontinue that part of the business or they would leave it. The decision was carried out.

At a meeting at which he was speaking, he noticed two ladies leave the audience. He later learned that they were the wife and daughter of a prominent hotel keeper, who sold liquors. They informed the husband and father that liquor must be abolished from their home or they would go.

The liquor was cast out. Gen. Dow's uncle, Jonathan, was a sea-captain and when he returned from one of his voyages, he brought a young colored girl. She was taken into his family, educated, and became a good woman—married and lived in Portland. The sea-captain required her to procure that she would not divulge her master's name or the name of the ship which bore her to freedom. She kept the secret until the emancipation of the slaves took place—then she said that her master's name was "Turk," and that he was the father of Dick Turner who was the Captain in command of Libby Prison when Gen. Dow was there a prisoner of war.

He says, "I was in our court-house and desired to change a bank-bill for those of a smaller denomination. The county treasurer, a venerable man, was sitting at a table upon which were several piles of bills of various denominations. I knew him well, as he did me. Approaching him, I asked him to change my bill."

"I am sorry I cannot accommodate you. I have no money, he said."

"Have no money?" said I in surprise. "Why, there, pointing to his table, 'there is a great quantity.'"

"Ah! But that is not my money; it belongs to the county," was the reply, which taught in a word volumes about the place, of money belonging to other people. When twenty-six years old he states he had acquired sufficient means to establish a home of his own, and he met his future wife, Miss Maynard, at the home of a Mrs. Smith, in Portland, not far from his house. He said, "I called one evening with my sisters, who had invited her to attend with them an entertainment in the 'village' as 'down-town' was then called. When Miss Maynard appeared to get into the sleigh, I excused myself from dismounting to assist her because of a lame ankle from which I was suffering. When we returned after the entertainment, despite my infirmity, and her remonstrance, I insisted upon helping her from the sleigh and escorting her to her door. My sister Harriet remarked I entered the sleigh. 'Neal, I am glad to see that your lame ankle appears to be much improved.'"

About two years after this we were married, and on our wedding day went to live in the house built by me directly opposite the home in which I was born, and where my father resided. There nine children were born, and there my wife died on the 13th of January, 1883, 53 years less seven days, after our marriage.

Of our children, Edward, Henry, Joseph and Russell Congdon, died when about two years of age, and Frank Allen died in 1855 when eighteen years of age at St. Paul, Minn., whether he had gone in quest of health, with his mother to care for him. Louisa Dwight, our eldest child, married the late Hon. Jacob Benton of Lancaster, N. H., now deceased. Our third child, and second daughter, Emma Maynard, married William B. Gould of Portland, and is now living in Boston, Mass. The only surviving son, Frederick Neal, our fifth child, lives in Portland. The youngest daughter and youngest surviving child, Cornelia Maria, is unmarried, and upon her mother's death, succeeded to the care of my house.

A true wife and a noble woman, she bore with pious fortitude and patience the many trials, great sacrifices and even dangers, of which the world could know but little, that she was obliged to encounter because of the nature and unpopularity of the work in which her husband had enlisted. Naturally retiring in disposition, and averse to excitement in every form, she met without complaint that which now was forced upon her. Convinced that it was her duty, she inspired other women to assist her in obtaining the influence of a large number of the good women of Portland in favor of the cause to the service of which she cheerfully devoted herself, and which she aided in many suitable ways.

Gen. Dow says: "When I felt that duty called me to enter the military service of our country, she bade me God-speed. When my engagement in Libby Prison cut off my correspondence with the English Press, through which I had tried to aid in the creation of a sentiment in England favorable to the Union, her letters to my friends in Great Britain were widely published in the same interest."

When eighteen years of age he says he joined the Volunteer fire department of Portland, and retained connection with it for more than twenty years. Some of the most appropriate, as it had notice of this is appropriate, as it had something to do with the temperance movement in Portland in the earlier days of that reform. The laws of Massachusetts continued to be those of Maine for some time after the separation. Among them was that requiring every citizen between the ages of 18 and 45 to perform military duty in the militia. There were exemptions from this, among them members of the society of Friends and members of any fire department.

Although born and reared a Friend, I did not care to claim exemption on that account, as my objection to serving in the militia had other foundation than that obtaining with the Friends, from which society I was already, in fact, drifting. Indeed, I may as well pause here to state that about this time my views as to the propriety of resorting to violence to 'earnal weapons,' and especially as to war, under certain conditions, becoming known, the quarterly meeting of Friends, in which I had a birthright, appointed a committee to deal with me.

I remember, as if a recent event, the call of the three elders upon me for the purpose. They found me at my father's house, and we had a private session in the parlor, the three sedate old Quakers sitting with hats on, more amused, probably, by my persistence than disturbed by my departure from the faith. After a half-hour or more of pleasant intercourse upon various subjects, they departed to report me as incorrigible. My dismissal from that society followed.

Thousands of children suffer agonies from breath, hard and full belly with occasional gripings and pains about the navel, pale face of leadon tint, eyes heavy and dull,

You can keep one or four burners at an intensely hot or merely simmering flame. Come in and let us show you how these Florence Automatic Stoves work, how simple and reliable. No wicks to burn out. No valves to leak. Steady blue flame. Burner right up under the cooking. Cheaper than coal or gas. Florence Oil Stoves have no wicks to trim, no valves to leak. Clean, convenient and cool.

FOUR-FOLD BENEFIT

From Two Grand Medicines in Spring Hood's Sarsaparilla Peptiron Pills.

You know that physicians often give two prescriptions, perhaps more, for medicines to be taken together, or alternately or at different times, because desired results cannot be secured by one medicine alone.

The most successful combination spring medicine treatment that we know of—because perfectly "compatible" and productive of the best results—is in Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills. The former thoroughly searches out and expels impurities from the blood, creates an appetite and promotes digestion and natural action of the kidneys and liver, while Peptiron Pills give the powerful tonic—they literally "put iron into your blood"—that just balances the requirement of perfect health.

Hood's Sarsaparilla should be taken before meals and Peptiron Pills after meals—patients taking them so report the benefit is four-fold—prompt, positive and permanent.

NOTICE

Turn the things you don't want into cash which you do want, by advertising in the Advertiser. It is often the case others may need just the things that have ceased to be useful to you.

People of Oxford County WHO HAVE FARMS TO SELL

I wish you to understand the reasons why it is to your interest to have your farm listed with E. A. Strout Farm Agency.

Do you think you should pay any charges for advertising your farm which does not bring you a buyer and helps an agency to finance the disposal of a more desirable property? We do not.

Do you think it to your advantage to have your farm in the hands of only one agent when more will gladly assist you in listing and advertising the same without any expense to you whatever at the same time giving you the privilege to dispose of it yourself if an opportunity avails itself without charge? We do not.

I think you will agree with us when you realize that we make no charge for listing and advertising your farm at the same time giving you the privilege of withdrawal without cost to you.

Further we guarantee to protect you from all commission on sale of any other agent when we sell your property.

Call and list your farm with us though it may be listed with others or write for free listing blank today.

SPRING MILLINERY.

Hats Set Well Up On the Head and Ascend to Unknown Heights—The Popular Colors

The chic originality of this season's smart hats is portrayed in all the fashionable shapes in most novel effects and combinations. Hats set well up on the head and have not forgotten the inclination to slant jauntily over the eye. The brims assume many bizarre forms. Trimmings are used sparingly but ingeniously.
Hats ascend to unknown heights. The high effect may be attained by ribbon bows, fan effects, feather fancies, high draped effects or turned-up brims.

Flowers of the smaller variety form charming wreaths and bouquets. Taffeta, velvet and faille ribbons figure in such crops of bow-headed motifs, small ostrich tips, flowers and pom-poms, buckles, embroidered motifs and fancy pins all are listed for voguish millinery trimmings.

The chief millinery fashion influences are derived from the Directorate, the Restoration and the Second Empire periods.
High effects continue in favor, but the small, low, round hat with narrow rolled brim has been recently introduced.

Simplicity dominates the hats for sport wear, which are mostly in sailor shapes. Hemp and Milan ribbon or leather trimmed are offered in infinite variety.

In the color race are African brown, Bordeaux blue, various shades of gray, pastel, shades, azure, a bluish green—Mastis and Shantung, yellow, and, it goes without saying, black and white.
A sailor's upper faced with satin the crown griddled with a taffeta band had at the right side of the crown thrust outward a bunch of variegated roses. Narrow and straight of brim is a hydrangea straw hat simply trimmed with a faille band around the crown finishing with a bow at the back. A high round crown of violet ribbon and cream Milan. Topping the crown is a bunch of ruit. Larger than the majority of hats seen is a black straw with a round crown, whose sole trimming is a flat white bird directly in front. The broad brim rolled on the side has upper facing of white taffeta.

Quite adorable is a turban of highly polished blue straw, which has the brim trimmed with three pink boxplaitings of taffeta. On the right side of the brim is a gun metal pearl pin. Each season may come and fashions may go, but the sailor shaped hat is ever the favorite. A blue straw sailor is a combination of blue and brown. The brim is underfaced with brown taffeta. At the base of the crown are knots and ends of brown ribbon.

Sailors that are straight of brim are occasionally bound with colored leather and a colored leather band encircling the crown. One which caught my fancy had a leather band scalloped at the top; in each scallop was a tiny fruit.

A mist gray Neapolitan shape, trimmed with three distinct clusters of rose, nestling in gray foliage, had the narrow brim faced with self-toned gray.
One of the floral clusters tucked under the crown apparently lifted it to a considerable height.

A gem of a hat is of purple straw.
The crown is high and square with a narrow straight brim. Tucked in the crown is a huge bow of purple velvet and two towards the front. Nestling between the loops are purple pansies.
Than 1916. Not less than 1,800 square feet of floor space, good daylight and modern conveniences. Diagrams, form of lease and blank proposals and specifications may be obtained of the Norway postmaster.

The Christian W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. C. W. Chick, Paris street on Wednesday afternoon, April 12 at half past two.

COL. W. W. WHITMARSH.

William Whitman Whitmarsh was born in Norway, May 27, 1835. He was the only son of Capt. John and Charlotte (Stevens) Whitmarsh. He is descended from Revolutionary and Puritan stock on both sides.

On the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion, he was a member of the Norway Light Infantry in command of Capt.
George L. Beal.

Port Sumner in Charleston Harbor, S.
C., was fired upon April 12, 1861. Three days after President Lincoln issued his proclamation calling for volunteers and asked for one regiment from the State of Maine.

Governor Israel Washburn at once put himself in communication by telegraph with the higher militia and company officers and furnished all necessary orders for the duty in filling the ranks of the ten companies required. Of these ten companies, Portland raised six, Lewiston two and Auburn and Norway one each. The enthusiasm was beyond precedent. In two days after the recruiting papers had been received by Captain Beal from Aus-tine, the Norway company had been filled and two days after that was on its way to Portland. Whitmarsh was one of the very first to enlist and received the appointment of orderly sergeant. And here it may be said that though only one regiment was called for from the State, nine had been organized before Oct. 1st, but they were all three year men, while the first regiment was enlisted for three months. However, after its term of service had expired it was reorganized as the 10th Maine, early in October of that year.

The First Maine, under Captain Carroll, left for the front in the month of service May 3, 1861, at Portland, but on account of the measles breaking out among the men the regiment did not leave for Washington till about the first of June, where it went into camp at Morrison Hill and there remained on guard duty till sent home to be mustered out in August. The Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth Maine Regiments participated in the disastrous battle of Bull Run.

On the organization of the 10th Maine, Portland had four companies, Lewiston two, Saco, Norway, Auburn and Aroostook one each. Captain George L. Beal of Co. G, of the First Maine was chosen as colonel of the regiment and Henry Rust Jr., became captain of the Norway company, but was soon commissioned as lieutenant colonel of the 13th Maine, and Lieutenant Jonathan Bliss was promoted to be captain of the William W. Whitmarsh as first lieutenant and Henry R. Millett as second lieutenant.

The Tenth Maine, after a period of service guarding the railroad in the vicinity of Baltimore, Md., joined the forces in Shenandoah Valley, Va., under Gen.
N. P. Banks. It was always noted for its excellence in the manual of arms and its fine appearance on dress parade, and was called the "Band-Box Regiment," for the neatness of the uniforms and equipment of both officers and men. But before the fighting was over, the men in the retreat of Banks' army, pursued by Stonewall Jackson, with a greatly superior force, from near Winchester to Williamsport on the Potomac, March 25, 1862, and at Cedar Mountain, Va., Aug.
9, and Antietam, Md., Sept. 17th of the same year, where the regiment lost heavily in killed and wounded. In the retreat to Williamsport the 10th Maine with full ranks was the rear of the army and skillfully kept the pursuers at bay.

General Banks was so pleased with the conduct of both officers and men that he complimented them highly, and on another occasion, in the retreat of his army down Red River in the spring of 1864, when the 10th Maine had been reorganized, he again selected the 10th Maine to lead the march to the Union line at Sabin Cross Roads and having repulsed the enemy under General Richard Taylor, a brother-in-law of Jeff Davis and son of "Old Rough and Ready," hero of Buena Vista and President of the United States, placed it to cover the retreat of the army.

On account of sickness and being detailed as quartermaster, Lieutenant Whitmarsh did not participate in the battles of Cedar Mt. and Antietam. The boys of this old company say they were never better than when Lieutenant Whitmarsh dealt out of their rations to them.

He was mustered out with his company in May, 1863. With Col. Beal and other officers, Whitmarsh began organizing the 29th Maine, which was mustered into the service in the latter part of that year.

Portland had in the 10th Maine four companies and Auburn and Lewiston two each. Whitmarsh was commissioned captain of the Norway company, the regiment went south and joined the 19th Army Corps of Gen. N. P. Banks' Army of the Gulf, and participated in the disastrous Red River campaign, afterwards transported to Washington, D. C., where the corps, just in time to save the city from capture by Early's forces, and finally becoming a part of Gen. Philip H.
Sheridan's army in the Valley of the Shenandoah. Captain Whitmarsh commanded his company at Sabin Cross Roads, Pleasant Hill and Cedar Creek, Crossing, La., and at Winchester, Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek, Va. At the latter battle he was in command of the regiment, notwithstanding the panic among other troops, and his heart was gladdened by Sheridan's arrival on the field where he had ridden upon hearing the firing from Winchester, "twenty miles away," and where he turned disastrous defeat into a glorious victory. The charge of the Union troops that followed Sheridan's arrival on the field, which decided the fortunes of the day, was participated in by the 29th Maine and its temporary leader, who amply demonstrated in the movements of the day his capacity to skillfully handle a regiment of troops under fire, whether in retreat or the victorious march.

At the building of the famous Red River, La., dam in the Spring of 1846, it floated down over the rapids of the river near Alexandria, some dozen of our gun-boats, Captain Whitmarsh had charge of 100 men. The work was in charge of Lieut. Col. Joseph Bailey, acting chief engineer of the 10th Corps. The dam had fallen so low at that place from the time the gunboats had gone up the river with Banks' Army, that the channel was scarcely 20 feet wide and 3 feet deep.
The gunboats required 7 feet. The current was swift, running nine miles an hour and had a fall of 10 feet. Few believed that the project of building a dam to raise the water to the height required was feasible. The work was done by constructing wing dams in addition to the main dam, and was completed in about 10 days' time—the men working night and day. The gunboats were successfully floated down the stream over the rapids to deep water and the cheers of the army. Col. Bailey for this feat received a commission as brigadier general, and the thanks of Congress.

Durand, Wis.—"I am the mother of fourteen children and I owe my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I was 45 and had the Change of Life,
a friend recommended it and it gave me such relief from my bad feelings that I took several bottles. I am now well and healthy and recom-

—Mrs. MARY RIDGWAY, Durand, Wis.

A Massachusetts Woman Writes: Blackstone, Mass.—"My troubles were from my age, and I felt awfully sick for three years. I had hot flashes often and frequently suffered from pains. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now am well."

—Mrs. PIERRE COUNTESS, Box 239, Blackstone, Mass.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dizziness, impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and dizziness, should be heeded by middle-aged women. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has carried many women safely through this crisis.

A detail from Captain Whitmarsh's men guarded for a time the assassins of President Lincoln.

It was a proud day for the Norway officer when he marched his company up Pennsylvania avenue in the grand review of the Union armies at the close of the war.

General Beal having been appointed to command a sub-district in South Carolina (where the 20th Maine had been ordered) with headquarters at Darlington, Captain Whitmarsh was appointed provost marshal. He inspected the Florence prison where so many of our captured soldiers had died from starvation and inhuman treatment. On reporting the condition he had ordered to arrest the keeper, but when he appeared with his guard to seize him, the bird had flown.

In March, 1866, he was mustered out of the army, having been in service between four and five years.

There is but one man alive of the Norway company of the First Maine, who enlisted with Whitmarsh in April, 1861.
That man is Winfield S. Cordwell, formerly of Greenwood, now a resident of Norway.

Since the war, Whitmarsh was proprietor of the Elm House for many years, served in the Legislature of the State, was county commissioner for 10 years, during which time the county seat was moved from Paris Hill to South Paris, largely through his efforts and for many years he had been the treasurer of the Norway Water Company.

No man is more popular or better liked than he. He belongs to several secret societies and orders, but the one he prizes most is the Loyal Legion, composed of officers of the Union armies.
He is enjoying good health and bids fair to be with us for many years.

His home, which we sincerely hope, when Hon. Henry B. Cleaves was elected Governor of Maine, he appointed William W.
Whitmarsh on his staff, with the rank of colonel.—C. F. Whitman.

WHY THEY WIN

The most valuable crops are those which are treated with the best fertilizers, and the best fertilizers are those which contain nature's food.

Lowell Animal Fertilizers are made of BONE, BLOOD, MEAT and high grade chemicals. They make your soil rich and productive in nature's own way. And they are always active, continually feeding the crop with nutrition enough to keep the soil rich and productive.

The war cut off the supply of potash. We immediately conducted extensive experiments through New England with specially prepared formulas, which produced abundant crops.

"The Maine Experiment Station tried out fertilizers—some with and some without potash. The result proved that the yield of potatoes without potash was far more profitable. And the potatoes did not suffer from lack of potash."

No. 25—300 acres. This farm is a real bargain for anyone as it is splendidly located and well adapted for all farming purposes. Located as it is, being only 50 miles from Portland and 25 from Lewiston and Auburn, it is a most desirable place to live. It has two good live R. B. villages of 4,000 people. Said villages being well represented in business lines, good graded schools and churches of all denominations. First-class hotels, National and Savings banks, stores of all kinds. On this farm there is a 12-room Colonial house with broad piazzas, all 100-ton stable 40x40 connected. Barn 42x62. Will cut 45 tons of hay and 60 tons of fodder. 500 young apple trees beginning to bear. 50 barrels last year, an off-season. 300 sugar maples. Good highways, low tax rate. Now taking into consideration that there are about $4,000 worth of buildings on this place and that $2,000 worth of wood and pine timber that may be cut at any time and sold therefrom, this is actually the best bargain for a splendidly located farm proposition that we know of anywhere in this or any other town interested in this proposition, write or call on Woodman & Richardson, Real Estate and Insurance.
